*Every President of the United States from Theodore Roosevelt to Harry S. Truman inclusive and all California Governors from Pardee to Brown have accepted invitations to speak to the Commonwealth Club of California.

History

EDWARD F. ADAMS, noted editorial writer and founder of the Commonwealth Club of California, believed that a public problem is like a mountain—there are many ascents, but always one that is best. Adams was joined by Dr. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president, University of California; Dr. Frederic Burk, president, State Normal School (predecessor of San Francisco State College); Supreme Court Justice William P. Lawlor; and John P. Young, managing editor, San Francisco Chronicle. The 1903 founding membership finally totaled 55 men whose ideals and foresight have lived after them.

SINCE the founding date, February 3, 1903, the Club has remained dedicated to its original objective: to "investigate and discuss problems affecting the Commonwealth and to aid in their solution"—to "maintain itself in an impartial position as an open forum for the discussion of disputed questions"—and "to influence public opinion in all proper ways in accordance with conclusions reached after due investigation."

Legislative Accomplishments

- The Governor's Budget law
- Small Claims Court
- Establishment of the Office of Public Defender in larger cities
- The State Judicial Council to unify and improve efficiency of the State Courts
- Banning of the "professional juror"
- Forbidding court reversals on mere technicalities
- The sponsor system of candidate nomination
- Voters' pamphlet on ballot measures
- Permanent voter registration

The Commonwealth Club

"Dedicated to 'getting the facts' in matters affecting the public welfare."

THE Commonwealth Club is a men's organization of 8,500 Californians who enjoy honest contest and dispute for the rewards of truth. Its forte is unbiased candor in the examination of vital questions as they affect our communities, the State of California, our nation, and the world in which we live.

It is a Club that thrives on the energy of thinking men who like to "get the facts," disseminate them, and then translate them into action.

Activities...

FOR OVER HALF a century, the weekly Friday luncheon at the Sheraton-Palace has been a familiar and important part of San Francisco Bay Area life. Here domestic and world topics are discussed by authoritative speakers—enlivened by a question and answer period. The Club never pays a speaker an honorarium or expenses. Men of national and international stature address the Commonwealth Club, a much sought after opportunity.

The essential strength and interest of the Club centers in the Study Sections that cover the fields of foreign relations, government, public affairs, science, business economics, and agriculture. As many as 26 of these groups are active, each with its own chairman and recorded minutes. The fact finding reports of the Sections are published for membership distribution and made available to government, business and civic organizations. The reports have significantly influenced numerous state and national decisions.

Income from the Club's $335,000 Permanent Fund is used for research on public problems, resulting in such achievements as the books—"The Legislature of California" and "California Social Welfare"—now used in college courses.

RADIO COVERAGE—The addresses at the Friday forum luncheon meetings are broadcast statewide through a network of many radio stations.

PUBLICATIONS—All Club members receive "The Commonwealth" (weekly), the Annual Progress Report containing important information, and the reports and recommendations of Study Sections. Election ballot measures are studied and reported upon. The membership votes thereon are widely quoted. Additionally there are many special reports and papers.
